REPORTS ON THE VORDERMAN BOAT RACE

TODD CRUISE surprised punters at Goodwood when he showed up in a Lotus Evija race car.

The Mission: Impassable star dressed a grey suit, blue tie and sunglasses to meet the famous Glorious Goodwood racecourse near Chichester, on Thursday (3 July).

He posed with punts and mingled with royalty, including Queen Elizabeth II's granddaughter Zara Phillips.

Cruise received a special welcome to the race by the British Army's Yorkshire Regiment band, which played the theme tune to his former show home. He is currently among the fifth instalment of the franchise in London.

Cruise allegedly leaves the red-horned white when attempting to exit the presentation, at which he had given the winner's trophy to rider Edie Campbell, who partnered the late Williams-trained Joe The Storm. The horse was wearing a 'halberd' suit for the second time at five days having triumphed in Ascot's Longbow Handicap on Sunday.

West Sussex leads in helping adults back to work

THE WEST SUSSEX Thank Family Partnership, led by West Sussex County Council, is helping the county for supporting families back into work, according to figures released by the organisation.

The Thank Family programme, which is dedicated to turning around the lives of vulnerable families across West Sussex, has so far helped 650 individuals back into employment.

Thank Family is the local version of the government's 'Troubled Families' initiative, which aims to help families change their lives for the better. It covers the whole of West Sussex and is being delivered jointly with health and borough councils, homelessness workers, Sussex Police and other local and community agencies.

The figures, which were compiled in May 2004 by the Department for Communities and Local Government, also show that of the 1,700 families identified as being eligible for the programme, six have met the government's criteria for being 'turned around'. The figures have now risen to 200 which is well at the full target of 1,000.

The key factor that Thank Family wants to address are youth crime, antisocial behaviour, absence from school, and adult family members being out of work. However families with complex needs also face many other challenges, such as improving their parenting skills, physical and mental health issues, domestic violence, accommodation problems, debt, poor nutrition, and lack of essential skills.

As part of a package of services designed to address the family's complex needs, a Tim Wright said he assisted, to a family, who worked with them to set up a plan to make their tenancy, and help them take steps towards self-sufficiency.

Peter Evans, West Sussex County Council Cabinet Member for Children - Start of Life, and 'Helping adults back to work' has always been a notoriously difficult area in which to get results, so our success is a real achievement both for the Council and the families involved.

"Generally there is no single factor which prevents people as troubled families from working, and it takes the intervention of a number of agencies to address these issues. However one factor that has been identified as a barrier to work is a number of cases to domestic violence. We are fortunate to have one of the best domestic violence resolution services in the country. North Sussex, working in partnership with Thank Family, and their contribution has helped a number of individuals take the significant step of finding employment."

"We also have an excellent relationship with the Department for Work and Pensions, a strong local economy, and a dedicated team of Key Workers. When all of these elements combine we can see that Thank Family is making a real difference in West Sussex."

Appointment of Vice Lord-Lieutenant by the Lord Lieutenant of West Sussex

Mr Harry Goring, DL, new Vice Lord-Lieutenant for the County of West Sussex.

THE LORD-LIEUTENANT of West Sussex, Mrs Susan Poyer, last week appointed Mr Harry Goring, DL, as her Vice Lord-Lieutenant for the County of West Sussex.

Mr Goring succeeds Mr Gordon Treagus, DL, who is standing down after five years in the post.

Mr Goring served as High Sheriff of West Sussex from 1999 to 2004 and was appointed a Deputy Lieutenant for the county in 1994.

He was educated at Eton and Winchester Royal Agricultural College. In 1995 he took on the management of the Merton Estate. The estate is now managed by his son.

Mr Goring was on the C&AG (County Lord-Lieutenants Association) chairman for six years and was chairman of the Sussex branch. He was also on the Historical Treasures Council and was chairman of the South East region for six years.

As well as being a former oil landowner, he is a sporting vice-president and a chess player.

He is married to Pippa, and has six children.

"Welcoming the appointment, Mrs Poyer said: "Harry Goring has been a great support to me in his role as a Deputy Lieutenant over the years, and I am greatly looking forward to working even more closely with him as my Vice Lord-Lieutenant. He has a deep knowledge of the county, having lived here all his life, and has shown will be invaluable. I must also thank Gordon Treagus, the outgoing Vice Lord-Lieutenant for his loyal support and friendship over the past five years, particularly in the early days when I was so new to my role."

The post of Vice Lord-Lieutenant is appointed by the Lord-Lieutenant at her discretion, subject to the approval of Her Majesty The Queen. Appointment to the office of Vice Lord-Lieutenant is in recognition of distinguished service to the community, predominantly in a voluntary capacity, or to the county or country. The Vice Lord-Lieutenant undertakes to assist the Lord-Lieutenant in the performance of any duties that may be laid upon him. This can include representing her at welcoming Royal visitors to the county, at formal functions, social occasions, attending occasions or attending Remembrance Day services.

Operation Watershed: £1m available to prevent flooding

WEST SUSSEX County Council has not forgotten the flash floods of 2003, 2004 and 2004.

While the county looks at summer sunshine, the County Council wants to press on with helping communities stay safe against extreme weather.

Communities affected by flooding, who want help to stop it happening again, should get in touch.

Can or available from the County Council's Operation Watershed fund for community projects delivering improvements that prevent flooding or help to make their town or village more resilient.

Typical projects include: Clearing private drains that have been neglected; Laying or fixing equipment such as showers, sinks or drains for contamination to rain; Commencing surveys and/or repairs; and Developing community flood plans.

County Council Cabinet Member for Resident's Services, Lord Leonard, said: "We want to reward people that flooding is their."

"How a chance to be doing the work to readiness for the coming winter, so if you know there is a flooding issue in your community or neighbourhood, tell us."

Lord Leonard added: "Funding is the last time of year to carry out drain clearance, because it falls outside normal season for bins."

"If you need help with clearing your drain, especially if it is a water course that runs through your property, now is the time to make contact."

"Your local community officer can advise you how to get help from the Operation Watershed fund."

For more information e-mail: operationwatershed@westsussex.gov.uk or visit: www.westsussex.gov.uk and type 'Operation Watershed' in the search bar.

Case study - Water's Day flooding stopped in Aggouring.

A report of the floods of 2003 was overdue Aggouring's first flood report Operation Watershed.

Aggouring was badly flooded two years ago when a culvert underneath the village was overwhelmed by water.

It affected Water Lane, The Village Square and damaged the village hall.

Together with the Environment Agency, Aggouring Parish

Council applied to the Operation Watershed fund for £2,000 towards installing a web camera.

The camera was put above the culvert grid, at the foot of Water Hill, so the village could monitor water levels and check if any debris was caught in it.

It was put in the culvert when heavy rain had Aggouring on Water's Day.

Case Follow-up, Aggouring Parish Council administrator, said: "We monitored the culvert on a regular basis that day."

"We saw the water level was below the need for repairs."

"However upon checking at 2pm, we noticed a large log was caught under the grid."

"It was preventing the water from running freely and the culvert to the culvert was becoming overwhelmed."

She added: "We immediately reported this to the Environment Agency who acted straight away."

"They cleared the log, making the water to flow and the water level reduced."

Other projects in Aggouring to receive help from Operation Watershed last year include:

Aggouring Village Hall - permeable waste water could stop water entering through air vents, eight flood gates installed, and improved drainage channels put in the car park, and Hens Major Golf Club - the Black Ditch was de-silted which immediately moved water levels to drop in heavy rain.

Convoys to deliver beams for Felpham Relief Road viaduct start on August 11

LOGGERS delivering beams for the biggest market to be built in West Sussex will become a common sight as loggers begin the Felpham Relief Road and will start to be delivered Monday August 11.

The beams are required for the Felpham Relief Road and will start to be delivered Monday August 11.

Police will be securing convoys of two lorries on both days of the week until the weekend.

Following a major road crash, it is estimated it will take eight convoys between six and ten convoys to arrive at the construction site near they have the day depending on which end of the road they are going to.

The road work, which will be done in lengths, will involve a specialist to give long road work that runs from the Lacey Park, the Southern to Bognor Regis Rail Line, and the Bognor Regis Road Plan.

The Felpham Relief Road is one of two roads which make up the Felpham Regis Northern Relief Road project for other being the North Relief Road.

County Council Cabinet Member for Highways and Transport, Peter Martin, said: This ambitious engineering project to construct the road has been many years in the making.

Our officers have been working closely with designers and Police to manage the way these beams are transported – both locally and across the county – with as little disruption as possible.

This is a key step towards adding loggers Regis of its problems with traffic congestion and we will do the police to have with us in the weeks ahead.

Keynote about the project: The beams will be collected from Liverpool and transported to West Sussex on Monday.

They will arrive in three convoys of two lorries and will be delivered on Monday and Wednesday and the last lorry reaches the site on Wednesday.

One lorry will be delivered in total, so beams will be delivered a week, so beams are made from steel reinforced concrete beams.

The delivery vehicle being used are specialist.

The beams will be created by Police at off-park beams between a point and open.

The Police convoy will put up the beams from a lorry on the A259 at the Felpham roundabout. They will then occur them under a riding roadblock onto the A259 heading towards Bognor Regis.

The beams are so large they will have to go around some roundabouts at Bognor Regis the wrong way.

Once the beams have been delivered the beams carrying them are very long and so longer need a Police escort.

The delivery of the beams is expected to last for 15 weeks.

The Felpham Relief Road will serve two new homes at Bognor Regis built by developer Barratt Homes.

The new road is expected to open in 2015.

Kirdford community shop pioneer wins volunteering award from Prime Minister

THE DRUDS FORCE behind one of the UK's most successful community shops, Kirdford Village Stores in West Sussex, has become the winner of a volunteer care award, Prime Minister David Cameron has announced.

She Kaseley, who helped to found the almost 50-year-old with the help of the local community to open Kirdford Village Stores in 1967, is the latest recipient of a Point of Light award, which recognises outstanding individual volunteers, people who are making a change in their community and inspiring others. Each day, someone, somewhere in the country is selected to receive the award to celebrate their remarkable achievements.

The village of Kirdford was without a shop for more than three years when She Kaseley and others were motivated to create a new one that could become the centre of the community. By applying for grants and ad-hoc-raised fundraising, just under £50,000 was raised to lay a building in the village and transform it into a vibrant 'village shop and cafe, become a friendly customer service and local produce, which has become a community hub and social focus.

She has been chair of the popular Kirdford Village Stores since the shop opened in 2010 and the community's hard work was rewarded in 2010 when the store was named Best Corner/Village shop in Britain by The Telegraph magazine.

The Prime Minister's new Point of Light award has been developed in partnership with the highly successful Points of Light programme in the USA, which has recognised over 5,000 people. The US programme was established by President George H. W. Bush, and both he and President Barack Obama have publicly supported the partnership with Points of Light UK.

Whether it's a doctor visiting food bank users in her free time, a teacher teaching young people life skills, or a local business giving a voice to lonely people, the Point of Light award honours shining examples of volunteering across the UK.

Prime Minister David Cameron said: "I applaud the work that She has done to help out the local community and to grow community spirit in her area as the driving force behind Kirdford Village Stores. She is bringing people together and creating a real sense of the village. She is delighted to recognise She by making her a Point of Light."

She said: "Whilst developing any project of this nature takes a lot of work, by many people, there has been a certain serendipity about Kirdford Village Stores from the start - like it was meant to be. Its success is testament to wonderful teams of staff and volunteers, both in the shop and behind the scenes. I am incredibly proud of what we, as a community, have achieved together, and of the shop itself. It's been an amazing journey, and I'm honoured to receive this award on behalf of the community. Thank you!"

Nick Herbert, MP for Arundel and South Downs said: "She has been an exceptional local leader, and it is through her vision and hard work that the fantastic and award-winning Kirdford community shop was founded and has been such a success. She is the epitome of selfless volunteering that has made a real difference to her community, and she richly deserves this award."

Two British medical students have been stabbed to death in Borneo

Neil Doherty, left, and Adrian Braggan who were stabbed to death during a car crash with a motorcycle in Borneo.

UNIVERSITY and the killing of two British medical students Neil Doherty and Adrian Braggan, both 24, was a "tragic accident".

Malesian police said the men were killed at about 04:00 local time on Wednesday.

There had been an argument between a man and one woman before the killings, and four men have been arrested over the murders, police added.

Mr Doherty, from Aberystwyth, Gwynedd, and Mr Braggan, from Haverhill, Cambridgeshire, were in the front seats of a car which was parked at a hospital in Borneo, a place in one of the two Malaysian states on the island of Borneo.

In a statement, Malaysian police said the two victims had a drink at a bar shop, where one was rebuffed

Police and four men then passed the car to the men, before one man got out and attacked them with a knife.

The police added three suspects were arrested at the scene on local time and a fourth man arrested, while a fourth suspect was arrested at night.

The case is being investigated under Section 302 of the Penal Code which carries the mandatory death sentence upon conviction, the police statement said.

Police said Mr Doherty and Mr Braggan had been due to complete their placements in Borneo on Friday the morning of the very next day that two of our fourth year medical students working at a hospital in Kuching, Sarawak, have been tragically killed.

Neil Doherty and Adrian Braggan, both 24, were on a six-month placement at the hospital. They had been during their time here at the university in Borneo.

"This has come as a huge shock to us all and our thoughts are with their families and friends at this very difficult time."

"Two of our members of staff are flying out to Borneo as soon as possible and we are working closely with the British High Commission to support the other students and to coordinate their return to the UK."

The Foreign Office said it was aware of the deaths after it had been told "prompting immediate attention to these families at this difficult time."

Johnson to seek 2015 Commons return

Boris Johnson

BORIS JOHNSON has ended months of speculation by saying he will seek to become an MP again at next year's general election.

But Johnson was "highly unlikely" to hold any key post to become Conservative leader, explained David Cameron, as there was "no vacancy".

Mr Johnson also promised to serve his time as London mayor, ending in 2016.

The prime minister said it was "great news" that Mr Johnson was planning to return to Parliament.

The mayor has been linked with a number of parliamentary seats, including Uxbridge and South Ruislip, in north-west London, but he said he did not have a particular target in mind.

There has long been speculation that Mr Johnson will seek a return to Parliament so that he can mount a bid for the Conservative leadership when Mr Cameron stands down.

He said: "I think it's highly unlikely that that will happen because there's no vacancy. I think David Cameron has been a brilliant prime minister."

On BBC Radio 4's "What's on One", he added: "When David Cameron finally steps down, in 2016 or whenever it may be that there's a vacancy, but it will probably be filled by a person who's a foreigner now."

Sky Diary August 2014

By Peter Littlejohns

Venus is a bright object in the morning sky rising above the NE horizon at around 04.30.

On August the 10th our Moon will be at its closest to the Earth for the year and will appear about 14th bigger and noticeably brighter than normal.

Mars is drawing steadily as it moves away from us and sinks down towards the W horizon.

Aggravation in the constellation of Cancer rising just before dawn. On the 10th it appears to be on a collision course with Venus when, at 05.00, it gets taken to it within a quarter of a degree from our water planet. The pair is also close to the open star cluster M44 (the Beehive) for spectators with good wide-field binoculars.

Saturn is getting dimmer as it heads down in the W pointing down Mars on the 10th and setting around 03.00.

Uranus and Neptune are both low in the E & SE respectively but a telescope is necessary to see the latter. Neptune is another gas giant whose opposition takes from the Sun which takes any Earth power to complete one orbit. The atmosphere comprising hydrogen sulphide, ammonia ice and methane gives this distant planet a blue-green appearance. The Voyager 2 probe discovered that it has a family of eight satellites and four very intense rings.

There are five minor showers this month, the minor ones being: the 10th from the GSE with about 5 per hour; the 10th from the SE with about 10 per hour; the 10th from the SE with about 10 per hour; the 10th from the SE with about 10 per hour; the 10th from the SE with about 10 per hour.

The highlight shower is on the 10th/11th night from Perseus high in the NE with around 10 per hour at its maximum. Unfortunately the almost full Moon will drown out the fainter ones. Well worth a look though.

Britain facing massive contamination of chicken being sold in all leading supermarkets

A FOOD POISONING BUG was present in 95 per cent of fresh shop-bought poultry, according to a recent consumer survey.

Campylobacter was detected amongst the sample group in addition to being identified as the chicken pathogen 4 per cent of the time, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) said.

The ongoing survey will continue assessing the contamination prevalence and impact on consumers.

Richard Lloyd, executive director of FSA's, said: "The FSA's survey reveals unacceptably high levels of campylobacter and they must now publish the names of the retailers concerned so consumers can choose the best and most reassuring options."

Campylobacter is responsible for thousands of cases of food poisoning and the deaths of 400 people every year so much more must be done to minimise the risk.

of contamination at every step of production."

The research series, running from the February to the February, is looking at the prevalence and levels of campylobacter contamination on fresh, whole chilled, chickens and chicken packaging.

The survey will test 1,000 samples of whole chickens bought from UK retail outlets and smaller independent stores and butchers.

The new results are for the first quarter and represent 600 samples.

The FSA said that previous studies carried out into the prevalence of the bug had also shown around two thirds of raw poultry carried it.

Campylobacter is killed by thorough cooking, but as the most common form of food poisoning in the UK, affecting an estimated 60,000 people a year, and the majority of those cases come from contaminated poultry.

FSA chief executive Catherine Brown said: "The survey is an important part of the work we are doing to reduce campylobacter."

"It will give us a clearer picture of the prevalence of campylobacter on raw poultry sold at retail and help us to ensure the impact of interventions introduced by producers, processors, and retailers reaches our consumers."

"The chicken supply chain is looking at how interventions such as improved biosecurity on farms, rapid water chilling, and wet microbial washes can help reduce campylobacter."

"So when they take action and treat an intervention designed to make a difference, these survey figures will enable us to see if they really do make a impact."

"The low levels of contamination found on packaging, shown in the results released today, potentially reduce the effectiveness of the label-free packaging for poultry introduced by most retailers, which helps to reduce the risk of cross contamination in consumers' kitchens."

"There is still a lot more to be done by all elements of the supply chain to ensure that consumers can be confident in the food they buy."

"So soon as we have enough data to identify common campylobacter levels in different retailers we will share that data with consumers."

Palaces, canals and metro stations - not for those with vertigo...

Alisa Moss continues her ship's Baltic adventure on St Petersburg

St Petersburg, Russia

It is at the top of Peter the Great, where visitors believe he built the first.

It had taken two days and 300 nautical miles to journey almost to degree north and 30 degrees west from Stockholm to arrive at the brand new Baltic of Russia's cultural capital and second city.

In the distance, beyond the city's passport control on the quay was a long line of balconies, grey, high-rise towers, built on the finest soil of the city.

But very soon, we'd had our passports checked and we were looking at a coach alongside the River Neva, taking us to the golden spire of the Peter and Paul Fortress and the beautiful white and white Peter the Great. The fortress, decorated with statues of the Church of the Holy Spirit, stood on the site of Tsar Alexander II's assassination, was planning to be, while the city's history, history and history to the lovely view of a lake.

great, saying: There was no water, only rain.

There is no work to see in the 'Voice of the world' and it was in Peter's Palace that we were looking first. Built by Peter I to commemorate the death of the Swedish King and his daughter, the Peter and Paul, Peter was so full of gold it took my breath away. Outside, magnificent fountains were switched on at 11 on every morning, regulated by natural springs, spraying not with pump but under pressure from the different elements in the garden.

Our next stop took us out of the sunlight and down into the cellar of the Yankov Palace, where the most famous was found.

Then it was down still further, into the city's main, glowing, religious cathedral that seemed to go on forever with some evidence showing Art Nouveau architecture.

Then up again, with the chance to ascend along the main thoroughfare of Henry's Palace and later on to the main.

Two days was enough to do more than take St Petersburg, and to know you must become local again.

I was convinced that Tula, the capital of Russia, was our next destination.

Early, the word for part in Tula was to be.

We arrived on the day of the first national flag festival, held once every five years. Millions into the protest did turn through the medieval boulevard of the Margaret Tower, it's way to see why people left in love with this place. With cobble streets and immediate petrol-powered oil houses, it was like a page straight out of a story book.

After our day in Tula, however, left for Copenhagen and I finally got to see the petulant building within the Copenhagen Palace where TV's golden class, Margot, is shown. There was the famous portrait of the king, looking much smaller than I expected and there's the large one of Hans Christian Andersen too.

I took an open boat around the canal today, just another island, city, at one point, coming in close to the main, around opposite the English Church.

Back again on dry land, thousands were playing lawn tennis, as hands played for a prize hotel that was.

I found a table and sat down among the crowd, eating a light lunch, and was soon surrounded by a table.

Breakroom in East Harbour northern Germany

Wonderful, wonderful Copenhagen! My ship's adventure in the Baltic was over.

There were just two days at sea before we would be back in Dover. What to do? Here, it's not difficult. I can walk on the deck and play tennis, if I want, nothing more than less in a lounge and look out across the sea and a half second mile from the main deck to the horizon.

In between, I can sample some good food to any one of the three restaurants, not forgetting the main, served at that time with some special tea.

Well, even on adventure in the Baltic, there's no more and more.

This ship's adventure has been the perfect balance of adventure and once I have always wanted to see.

The goodness of summer camping

Camping is, admittedly, not for everyone, but it's also not as tough as many people think. You probably are not going to get bitten by a bear or start a forest fire, and you won't die, either, why not give it a go.

I have just come back from the most fantastic and fun camping trip at Dorset and luckily for us the weather was fantastic, which I know makes all the difference. Even more of a glampor, but this time

would be an awfully basic... and I would!

Why did I love it so much? The kids were totally engaged and relaxed! Yes, the internet is a wonderful place, but it is mindboggling amazing to put them all away from technology for the moment. The second you don't have to worry about how you're doing, that a flower would make an exceptional Instagram, you are free to truly enjoy the people around you and the experience you are living. When my friends and I returned the children that we placed were allowed on this trip, they all looked like they had seen a ghost! Horrified. Once they had recovered from the shock, and we were there, they could totally get the reason why. And surprisingly they didn't mind us doing it.

Camping is an obvious perk to camping, if they are allowed on your particular site. They would go, they keep away the bugs, and they provide an ambient lighting for whatever outdoor activity you have planned after dark. They take of course, but it is everyone's love of outdoor time that allows you to sit under the stars until the early hours of the morning. Telling of them, if you live in the city and

What's summer camping for kids

Children really grow, such as whole grains plus bread or wraps, which pack easily as they are a good source of fiber and will keep you feeling full longer than white bread. Fill your pockets or wraps with all natural nut butter. Bananas and oranges which are a good source of protein. Foods such as apples, pears and kiwis will last for a few days in a camping bag and are a better choice than a candy bar or salty bar!

There are many benefits instead, doctors are, you only see a few stars in a good night's sleep, when you're in bed, even, in a night that never goes bad and it's a great place to re-experience the significance of life and your family.

Don't forget the snacks and snacks, most people are made or sleep for those amazing early events. When you go camping, you are in peace because for some level of living, moments of the sun so make sure you look up the terms of the nature before you go. It changes every day and you probably don't want to make up something early.

Also, think about how many hours of light you are getting in one day. It's incredibly good for you and balances your body and a great sleeping great sleep and energy.

Going camping not only shows that you're fun and active, but it's a pretty cool thing to do with your family and friends for that "bad" good factor.

Thank you to all my fabulous camping buddies, you know who you are!

UK fashion makes a royal mint from 'the Kate effect'

IN 2013, THE DUCHESS OF CAMBRIDGE, popularly known as Kate, gave us a Christmas dress for the family official photograph at her primary house in Sandringham.

Now, the British dress designer is celebrating Prince George's first birthday with a quadrupling of company profits.

The company and the "Kate effect" was chosen.

Designer Caroline Rose said of her excitement when the company began to receive orders from the Duchess.

"She was placing an order like a regular person except the delivery address was Kensington Palace, which was quite exciting," said Rose.

Now, Rose's firm has expanded around the world.

"It really opened up for us the American market, which is notoriously difficult to get into. We have also opened up distribution in Japan, in China, in, yes, yes, yes, where it's quite hard to penetrate and export and really, the Duchess effect has been such that people have been looking at our store."

The Duchess's passion for high street fashion that has helped make her to the British public and UK fashion retailers have been copying the effect.

"Duchess Prince George came along, LK Bennett was identified as one of her favorite shoe stores. Kate did amazingly well when it was identified as being one of hers and I don't think Rosemary McQueen has had any harm done by designing the wedding dress and her regularly wearing their clothes for special occasions," said Eric Thompson, editor at director of industry publication Drapers.

The Rose dress worn by Kate when she and Prince William met President Obama and her wife Michelle reportedly sold out within hours, while her Alexander McQueen wedding dress has been widely copied.

Rose said that she is a positive trend not just for UK fashion a profit but also the British public's dress sense.

"I think she is playing a fantastic role in promoting British fashion from the broadest point of view, but she's also been named the most iconic of the designers, because she is so elegant. I think she's inspired a lot of the average people to think 'I need to be so elegant as her'," she said.

And with Rose's reporting on personal growth in the last twelve months, retailers will be hoping Kate continues to boost domestic fashion for the British public.

THIS UK'S 2011 CAR MARKET is continuing to grow, recording the sixth consecutive month of rising sales according to new figures released by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders (SMMT).

The figures show that a total of 270,000 cars were registered in July. That represents an increase of more than ten per cent compared to the same month last year. Registrations for the year to date are currently more than ten per cent higher than 2011.

The positive figures have prompted the SMMT to raise its prediction for 2012 overall, now 1.2 million. The organisation now expects the UK market to surpass 2.5 million by the end of the year.

Absolutely hotted, which sales also continue to grow, with 30,000 electric and hybrid cars registered last month and 10,000 sold in the year to date. That's an increase of a 10 per cent compared to the same period last year.

There's little change in the order of Britain's best-selling manufacturers and new Ford continues to lead with combined sales of 27,000 cars last month, representing a market share of more than 10 per cent. In second place is Vauxhall with 24,000 units registered, and Volkswagen sits in third place with 14,000 units.

Falcons fly to Holland

CHICHESTER ITALY'S SOFTBALL CLUB put the City as the softball world map last weekend, when they took a squad to the Allianz 100 National European Softball Tournament in the Netherlands.

A team of ten players flew out on Friday to meet up with eight Falcons De Vries Holland at the tournament venue in Almere, an online website Amsterdam. Potted against teams from all over Europe, the Falcons quickly found that the standard of play was much higher than at the UK. Many of the opposing teams were made up of US military personnel from bases in Holland, Germany and England, so naturally with that came some big hitting and fast, exciting action. Nevertheless, the Falcons held their own and found double plays, struck out the leg, stole for fun and despatched one of the European sides 'The Devil Squad' 7/0 on the first day.

The second day of the tournament brought drama as night hinder

Kelly Morda made a full stretch leap to catch a flyball that landed awkwardly. The match was so enthralling as it became clear that something was wrong – a tear to the last broken ball revealed that Kelly had broken and dislocated her elbow and knee. In true Falcons style, Kelly was back with the team at the earliest opportunity, sitting and as player, scheduled for an operation on her return home to Chichester. Her amazing catch still resonates in the game, to and the final victory.

With one further match to play, what followed will go down in the Falcons' history books forever. Despite three last efforts, the Chichester side lost out yet managed to hit a home run in their first tournament abroad. One Sam McGinn at the plate, who crashed a formidable home run over the left field fence. Penetration was the Falcons' delight as Sam rounded the bases, leaving the team happy to pick up their tournament trophy in

"It's a special, tough, opposition and we certainly put that," said captain David Morris. "It's just about it and composed against athletes who compete at an international level, we made a lot of new friends and made a good amount of ourselves and the City after picking up a noisy injury, Kelly bravely showed real team spirit and Sam's home run gave us something to talk about for years to come. Good job Falcons."

Anyone who wants to try softball and join the Falcons should email chichesterfalcons@gmail.com or visit www.chichesterfalcons.com. The Falcons are really welcome for both bats and wheels.
